In January 1996, Charles O'Rear took a photograph that billions of people in the world would see on their computer screen. He was going through Napa on his way to Marin County to 21 his girlfriend Daphne Irwin (whom he later married). The area was expected to be particularly green that time of the year 22 of the recent winter rains and the storm that had just passed over the place. As O'Rear was also working on a book about the wine country, he kept his eyes wide open 23 a photo opportunity that day. While he was going along California State Route 12, he spotted the hill, without the vineyards that once covered them; they 24 been removed a few years earlier because of a disease that had affected them. O'Rear remembers thinking, "My God, 25 grass is perfect! It's green! The sun is out; there's some clouds." O'Rear's image was named "Bliss" and became the star wallpaper for Microsoft's operating system Windows XP.

One of President John F. Kennedy's biggest achievements was Nasa's Apollo program. In 1962, Kennedy delivered a speech about the program before 35,000 people at a football stadium. His aim was to persuade everyone 26 NASA's Apollo program and to put a man on the moon. Among other things, 27 speech declared, "We choose to go to the moon in this decade and do the other things..." The entire speech, which was an 28 long talk, achieved two purposes: it renewed the faith of the American public and promised the world that America was ready to lead despite being young. Regarded as one of the greatest 29 in history, Kennedy was killed in 1963. America, nonetheless, became the first country to land on the moon in 1969. This achievement was, as Neil Armstrong, the first man on the moon, had promised "a giant leap for mankind" because it encouraged 30 to dream big and led to the development of great discoveries in every field.

Stress can be harmful. It can lead to health problems like depression, obesity, and diabetes. It is also associated with suicide. As a result, it is important to know how to handle stress.

One advice that is given by health experts is to exercise. Exercising helps because it produces something called endorphins. Endorphins are the natural chemicals of the body that reduce pain and that help relieve stress.

Besides exercising, laughing also helps. Humor is called the best medicine for a very good reason, because like exercising it also releases endorphins.

Arranging time for yourself is also essential. Experts say that if you're often busy than even simple daily chores can become stressful when in fact they are not. So it is really important that you make a time that really belongs to you and just put down everything when that time comes. During your time, do those things that make you happy and nothing else.

The fourth way to release stress is go to bed early and to have a good sleep. Before your sleep time approaches, make sure you do not do anything that may affect your sleep quality, including watching TV, playing video games, or drinking beverages that contain high amounts of caffeine.

The above methods will certainly help you, but eventually you will need to stand up to your stress. You need to own your stress. When facing your stress, you need to use reason and good judgement. Find out where it comes from, how it benefits you, and develop a step by step approach to deal with it.

Stress can have harmful effects. However, by changing our lifestyle and attitude to stress, we can actually turn it into something positive.

When I was visiting one of my former professors on a week-long leisure tour of America with a group of business friends, he mentioned how students were getting highly educated in some parts of the world despite little technology to help them. His opinion convinced me that a good lesson is not based on technology but on direct human communication and interaction. Yet, if you google-search the classroom of the future, you'll find only 4 million results agreeing with my belief, far less than the 471 million results that say that the classroom of the future should be based on technology.

A study by Hogan and Stubbs in 2003 puts doubt on the certainty of technology-based classroom. Their study found that the speaker's actions convey more messages to the listener than what he or she says. This means that students are learning a lot from nonverbal cues such as body language, distance, physical appearance, tech-free voice, and touch.

In the book To Kill a Mockingbird, the main character tries to tell her brother that everyone is just human. This idea can be applied not only to different races but also to teachers and students. Because of our human nature, we are naturally and unavoidably social. We want closeness, love, belongingness, care, and open and intimate communication. According to professor Maryellen Weimer, these qualities help us build harmonious peaceful relationships that help enhance learning much more than technology does.

In the eight-million-hit YouTube video I JUST SUED THE SCHOOL SYSTEM!!!, the presenter shows us a modern classroom and a classroom 150 years ago. Surprisingly, they are almost identical. So, what do we need a high tech classroom for if we fail to improve the communication and interaction in it? The classroom of the future cannot be based on technology but on communication and interaction.

36. What was the main reason for the writer to travel to America?
- (A) She went there for pleasure and fun.
 - (B) She was visiting her professor.
 - (C) She had a business meeting there.
 - (D) She went there to study a course.
37. In the first paragraph, how does the writer convince us that many people think the classroom of the future will be based on technology?
- (A) She describes the opinions of an expert who is also her teacher.
 - (B) She describes technology-based education in poor countries.
 - (C) She describes data on the number of websites about this topic.
 - (D) She describes a personal story of a time when she was a student.

38. Which of these quotations summarizes the opinion of the author in the third paragraph?
- (A) Cruelty is a part of human nature.
 - (B) Human nature can be changed.
 - (C) We cannot avoid our human nature.
 - (D) To succeed is in our human nature.
39. How does the author feel about the classroom of today compared to the classroom of the past?
- (A) It has very little differences with the classroom of the past.
 - (B) It is less technology-based than the classroom of the past.
 - (C) It is more about communication than the classroom of the past.
 - (D) It has fewer female students than the classroom of the past.
40. If the writer gave these opinions at a debate, what would most likely be his role?
- (A) An organizer (someone who sets up the event).
 - (B) An arguer (someone who takes a side on the topic).
 - (C) An attendee (someone who listens to the discussion).
 - (D) A moderator (someone who controls the discussion).
