Questions 36-40

We like to make friends with people whose interests, values, and lifestyles are similar to ours. This explains why among the large group of people that we know, we choose only a small group of people to call our friends. To make friends, people need to spend time together so they can discover their common interests and have a comfortable rapport with one another. If two people find that they like to spend time with each other, then a friendship is likely to develop between them.

What people can expect from their friends depends on the nature of each relationship. We may feel a sense of obligation toward many of our friends and hope they feel the same way toward us. We make time to be with our friends and expect them to find time for us. When we are depressed, we expect them to give us emotional support. Likewise, we are ready to help them whenever they need us. We understand that not everyone will want to get involved in our troubles, but we know we can count on our best friends.

Good friends may sometimes be kept apart by busy schedules, but email and cell phones help them stay in touch. Though a move to another state or country may cause a friendship to end, some people remain friends even if they haven't seen each other for many years. If a friendship continues to be mutually satisfying, two people may become lifelong friends. Of all the things that can damage a friendship, the worst one is when one friend betrays the other, such as revealing something that the friend was asked not to tell anyone.

36. The most appropriate heading for the article is _____.
(A) Classmates
(B) Long Time No See
(C) Different Interests, Values, and Lifestyles
(D) Friendship
37. According to the article, which statement is correct?
(A) Almost everyone we meet is our friend.
(B) We want to know our friends' interests, values, and lifestyles.
(C) Good friends don't expect to find time for each other.
(D) Good friends don't feel obligated to each other.
38. Which of the following ideas is NOT mentioned in the article?
(A) When we are in a depressing situation, we expect emotional support from our friends.
(B) When we are in trouble, we count on our best friends.
(C) When we need financial support, good friends should not say no.
(D) When our friends need us, we should be ready for them.
39. According to the article, what can damage a friendship? It's _____.
(A) when a friend conceals a secret
(B) when a friend reveals something that the friend was asked not to tell
(C) when a friend is very busy
(D) when a friend does not email or call
40. According to the article, when may two become lifelong friends?
(A) When they can see each other often
(B) When both are happy about their friendship
(C) When they don't move often
(D) When they don't have busy schedules
